“

As a digital sociologist, it's an honour to receive this award for innovation in AI. My research and interventions into the gendered problems with digital voice assistants calls for the social sciences and humanities to become embedded in AI, and that is exactly what this award has recognised.

As an innovator and lover of technology, including AI, I have always been passionate about using technology to find efficiencies in business processes. As a woman working in AI, the gender challenge is real most days, but by building the right team, who value and support me, consider the glass ceiling smashed.
